

H2O

Following extensive professional opportunities to work with young people, one of this author's long-term goals was realized with the writing of her first book for young people in 2001 - Pencils Down and now H2O. Like Pencils Down, H2O is a summer adventure, but Tony, the main character, is a rising eighth grader with new experiences and challenges through service projects with scouts and church, conservation project with scouts, and being a member of the Canby Falls Middle School Swim Team. H2O has strong family and community involvement with Tony and his family and friends in helping the elderly and those with special needs. The end of Tony's exciting summer takes place at the County Championship Swim Meet and the surprise for the team afterwards. H2O is appropriate for and will appeal to readers in the nine to fourteen age range, depending on their reading levels and interests. The writer's intent is to appeal to reluctant readers also. The market for H2O will be elementary and middle school libraries - public, private, church and parochial, public libraries, bookstores, and children's book clubs.
