

A Rogue Element

It is not the corporate world that decides your fate. Its your courage and talent that can make big differences in your life. I have seen the true drawback of being in a top-ranking company. Clients and customers expect flawless services from the company. They expect too much. They expect perfection. And even if it makes you unhappy, you have to maintain the companys respectable reputation especially when superiors become proud of being number-one... when they become greedy and ambitious even. They become so proud that they tend to make a big fuss even if small errors occur. They lose sight of the fact that we are not perfect and we tend to make mistakes especially when under too much pressure. They demand too much just to stay on top. They demand too much just to please clients and customers. But the truth is we cannot please each other all the time. Thats why people resign when they feel they cant take it anymore. They resign because they need a long break. They resign because they grow tired of being part of an organization that wants to stay on top and demands too much from its tired employees. They resign because they want to find happiness. They resign because they just want to do their own thing in life. -The Narrator
